We Heard You

Last semester, we distributed a survey that asked how you felt about the library and its services. After looking through your ratings and comments, we've implemented some changes that we hope will improve the library.

You Said ...

- “The library is too noisy, especially in the evenings.”
- “The electrical outlets aren't high-quality, and we need more of them in the study rooms.”

... We Answered

- Starting at 8 p.m., the library will go into “study hall” mode, with an emphasis on silent independent study.
- We moved several more study carrels upstairs and moved several tables downstairs. We hope this will foster an environment of quiet study upstairs and group study downstairs.
- We brought in a team of electricians to renovate the existing outlets and install new ones in the study rooms, many of which include USB outlets.
